This exhibition features work created by students in a class called Aesthetics of Health, in which the Department of Art and Art History at UT-Austin partners with Livestrong Cancer Institutes at Dell Medical School to explore the intersection of art and healthcare. By creating art with and for cancer patients, caregivers, and clinical staff, Aesthetics of Health students use their art to build relationships with others in a clinical setting.